

The missing link

At systemic, we work at the intersection of design and data, integrating both worlds to streamline information gathering and design processes into a media production workflow.

We create refined design solutions and convey our customers towards a media independent, more manageable and cost-effective creative workflow.

Manage change

Changing user habits and media use call for an integrated approach to the publishing process that serves all media types.

We deploy design and data services that are tied to your business strategy and radically change the obsolete project-centered media production workflow.

Structure

The publishing process needs a profound data structure to enable good, media independent design.

We look at legacy procedures and systems that are in use in your company and implement practical and realistic measures to streamline the design process individually.

Think design

Its easy to loose focus in the multi-channel-mix we have, design thinking helps defining actual business and marketing goals.

We think media independently and try to solve specific problems of your end-users by identifying their needs and motivations.

Think data

Strategic and design descisions have to be balanced with technical and structural consideration.

We have a multidisciplined approach to all strategic, design and technological descisions. This helps to avoid pitfalls and dead ends when all the pieces come together in a projects production phase.

Produce

Big productions often become very communication-centric to keep project members and resources up-to-date.

We have developed a workflow using technological and strategic tools that makes the creative and production process more manageable and cost-effective.

Think again

With experience and information gathered in a project, usually new applications and market ideas develop.

Our unique combination of design and data expertise helps developing new concepts that are tailored to your company and available systems and resources.
